Exhibit Visits Crewe Library

(Nottoway County, Virginia – September 23, 2017)

The Crewe branch of the Nottoway County Public Library System is now hosting a traveling exhibit from the Library of Virginia. The Virginia Women in History display features eight women who have made important contributions, and these women include Cynthia Eppes Hudson of Nottoway County. The exhibit will be displayed in the library through October 21 and Jackie Zataweski, Library Director, states that the library is happy to have an opportunity to present information in a different way.

“The library is more than just a collection of books. We provide entertainment and information by hosting programs, lending DVDs and preloaded tablet computers, enabling free access to electronic resources, and, of course, by offering books in a variety of formats (print, audio, and large print).” Zataweski continues, “I hope that this exhibit will interest not just people who already come to the library, but community members who have not visited lately, too.”
