What's Next?

From the Desk of Kathy Oliver...

As students head back to school and many are faced with post-secondary decisions, it is important to look at the job market and factor in what employees looking for. Which courses of study are more likely to result in a good paying job? Is the cost of a 4-year degree worth the time and the money?

Even though costs have risen significantly, people who have a 4-year degree usually still make more money, if they've done their homework and chose a degree that employers are looking for. Right now Mechanical Engineers are in high demand, and with the growth of AI data centers, chip manufacturing is driving demand for engineers. Here is a good article from Investopedia that tackles that question of what fields of education or training will be needed in the future. <https://tinyurl.com/y3uza7y8>

Speaking of Job-Related Things...

Don't forget that your library card gives you FREE access to Universal Class. When you have the chance, take some time to look over the course catalog and see where you might update your skills - or even learn some new ones!

JobNow from Brainfuse offers free employment support, too - there you'll find expert resume help and interview tips. Not only that, JobNow offers practice tests for the ASVAB, nursing school, teacher licensing and more.

New Items in Our Collection

These books will soon be part of our collection (if they're not already)...

On a Quiet Street by Seraphina Nova Glass: "A twisty thriller in the vein of The Girl on the Train." — Bustle

Road Seven by Keith Rossen: "Quirky and creepy by turn ... the blend of genres, from science fiction to cosmic horror, is masterfully executed. Readers will be riveted by this clever, unsettling adventure." — Publishers Weekly
